

Organizational Branding as a Means of Transformation

Prepared for GBIG

Throughout the life of any organization, there are times of turmoil and change.
It's inevitable.

It's also universally uncomfortable and often more than a little painful.

theKarmagroup

If you don't transform from your pain,
you will transmit your pain.

A culture that doesn't transform from pain,
will transmit its pain.

To associates, to vendors, and even to customers.

This, too, is inevitable.

What Does Branding Have To Do With This?

-  Organizational branding is all about identifying and articulating who you are when you're at your very best, so you can be that way all the time.
-  Organizational branding is about expressing what people should expect from you and then delivering an experience that meets or exceeds that expectation.

Two Objectives for the Next 40 Minutes:

- 1 Introduce how to develop an organizational brand capable of transforming a culture.
- 2 Introduce how to implement such a brand so it drives a transformative culture.

Developing a Transformative vs. Transmitting Culture

What is Culture?

Concept or Transformational?

Definition: Drives how work gets done within your organization

Living Your Values

CONSISTENT

INCONSISTENT

Transformative Culture

- “At your best”
- Purpose and values are aligned
- Inspires commitment to the organization
- Confidence and shared identity
- Values drive actions and behaviors

Transmitting Culture

- Under stress, tension
- Misaligned and unclear purpose
- Siloed and protective of your turf
- Focus on rules/policy to enforce change
- Fears drive actions and behaviors

Components of a Transformative Culture

How important is trust in your organization?

What is the cost of a lack of trust?

Business as Usual

Mistrust as Usual =

Behavior as Usual =

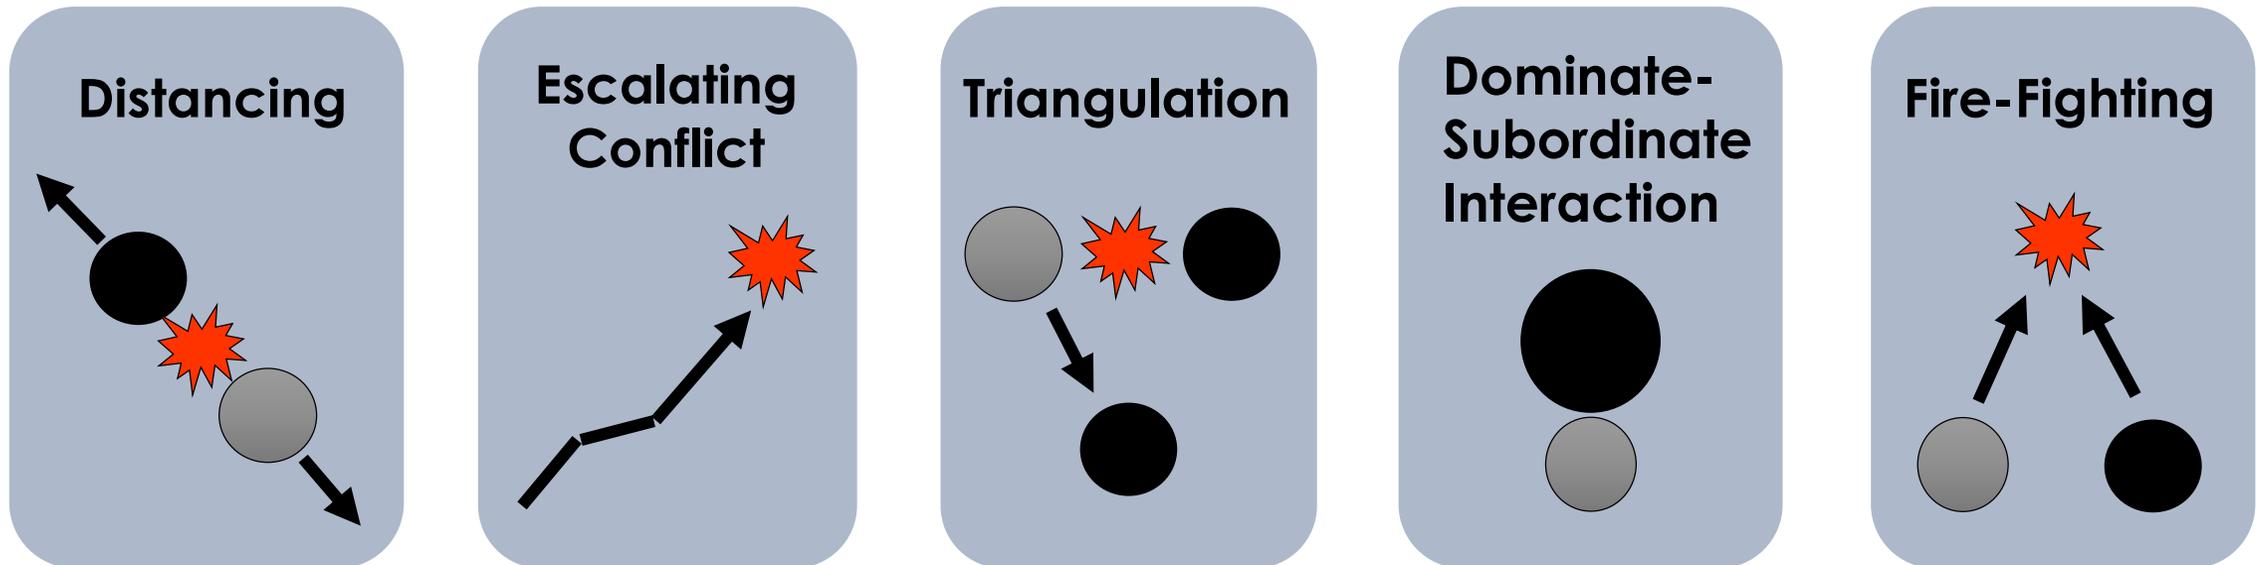

Business as Usual

Transforming Culture

Common Relational Patterns

In a transmitting culture, problems, tension and issues go unresolved and create common patterns within teams.

Business as usual is NOT a sustainable model

- The reason people retire
- Why people quit
- Why people don't participate
- The model of defensiveness and blame is a personal energy drain

Top 3 Drivers of a Great Workplace

IT STARTS WITH

YOU

The leader.

theKarmagroup

A Leader's Responsibility

In transformative organizations, leaders set the tone.

- Be uncompromising and resolute in your cultural standards, values and beliefs
- Show vulnerability
- Inspire your team
- Be consistent
- Address and engage real issues in a real way
- Recognize you may be the least knowledgeable person in the room
- Provide psychological safety for people to be open
  - Create an environment where feedback is given freely
  - Conflict and tension are normal and healthy

Where do you need the most work?

GAIN SELF-AWARENESS

Understand your impact and how you carry tension for others

CREATE ACCOUNTABILITY

Define, lead and create ownership for the culture

BUILD TRUST

Develop honest, trusting relationships with people & within your team

ALIGN TENSION & RESPONSIBILITY

Invest in and challenge others. Be resolute in your cultural expectations

Reflection

Embracing the reorder.

- How are you using this time to prepare for the new order?
- How are you building and reinforcing your workplace culture?
- How are you moving beyond surviving to make good use of this time and embrace the opportunity to reorder?
- What actions are you going to take?

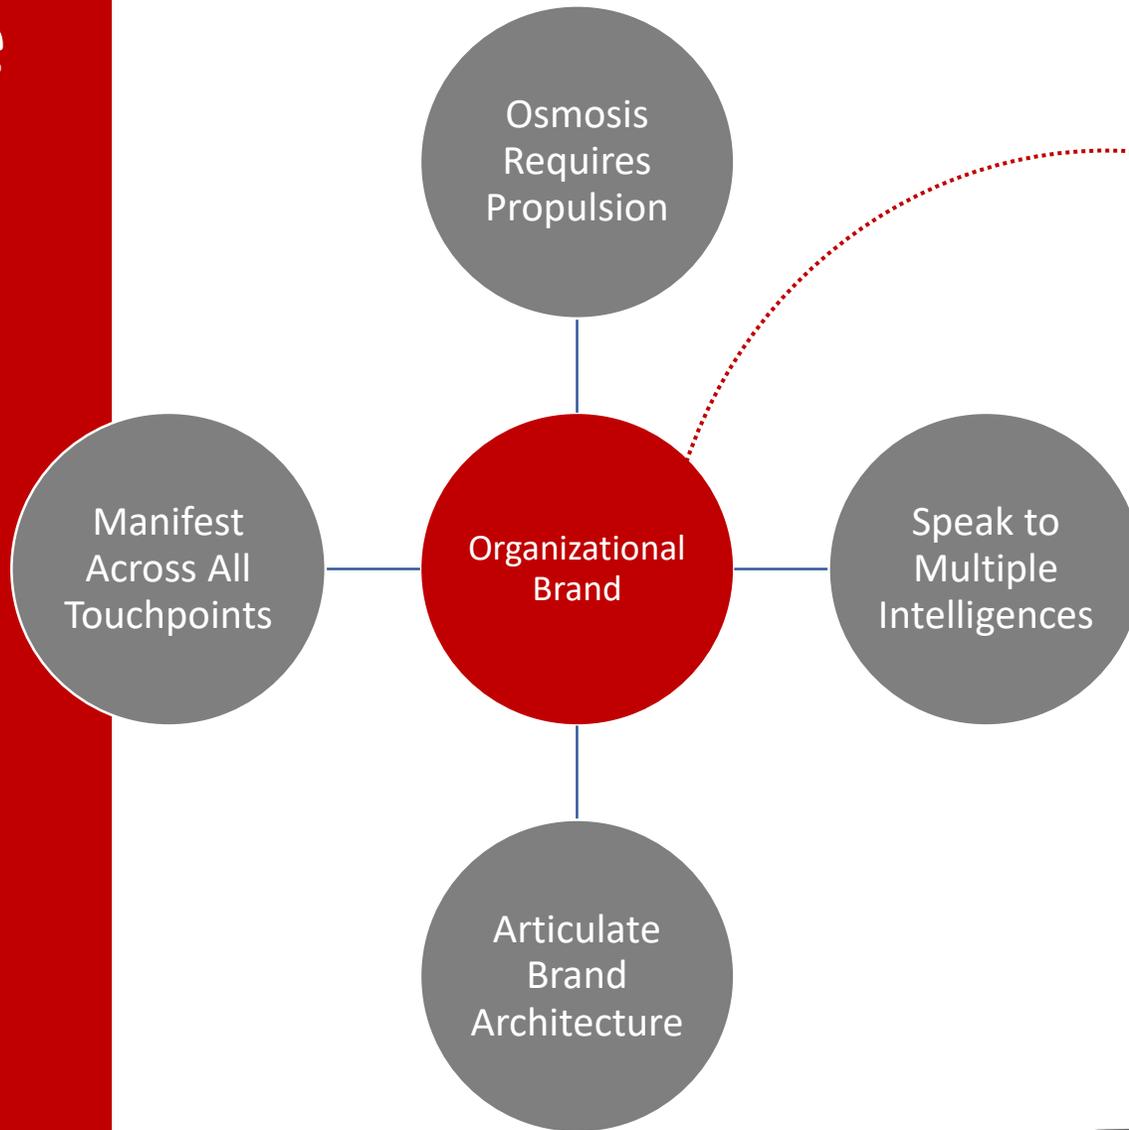

theKarmagroup

Implementing an Organizational Brand That Transforms a Culture

Driving the Reorder:

Cultural Infusion and Immersion

The goal of an organizational brand is to align the thoughts, attitudes, and activities of people so all work together toward a common purpose.

The benefits go beyond having a better functioning organization. A well executed organizational brand improves the recruitment and retention of top talent and drives sales.

Osmosis Requires Propulsion

Transformation is an action

- It needs the energy of leadership and planning
- It is not a "project" belonging to HR or Marketing
- It will be absorbed, but requires role modeling

Speak to Multiple Intelligences

RATIONAL:

What your community needs to KNOW

IMAGINATIVE:

What your community needs to THINK

DOGMATIC:

What your community needs to BELIEVE

EMOTIONAL:

What your community needs to FEEL

Articulate & Express The Brand Architecture

Mission:

WHY we're here doing what we do

Essence:

HOW members deliver the WHY

Print:

Take-away from constituent POV

Enemy:

How is the world harmed by our failure?

Personality:

Voice and character with which we engage

Manifest Across All Touchpoints

- People & relationships
- Place
- Process
- Product

What's the ROI?

What can you expect from a culture that transforms rather than transmits pain?

- Improved retention and recruitment
- Higher efficiencies and throughput
- More effective and efficient decision-making
- Higher intellectual engagement and innovation
- Improved cohesion around strengths
- Enhanced communication across the enterprise
- Better focus for aligned growth
- Increased perceived value in the relationship
- Improved accuracy/decreased errors and rework
- Improved attendance

Business would be easy, if it wasn't for all the people.
